

BIG THREE REJECT ADENAUER STAND ON FRENCH-SAAR ECONOMIC TIES

Chancellor Told to Quit Making Issue Political Football—Final Outcome Hinges on German Peace Treaty.

PARIS, Aug. 4 (AP)—Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's protest against France's cutting the coal-rich Saar away from West Germany was rejected yesterday by the Big Three western powers. They told him to quit trying to make a political football out of the disputed territory.

The views were made known in a note drafted by the three powers—Britain, France and the United States—meeting in Paris this week. The note, the text of which was released here, was delivered in Bonn by the Allied High Commission.

Adenauer had protested to the Allied high commissioners in a letter on May 29 that the economic attachment of the Saar to France under a 50-year agreement was illegal and that the territory's French-backed government was discriminatory.

The western note declared that the position of the three powers was unchanged and that the Saar's final fate will have to be decided in the peace treaty with Germany.

The note emphasized that the Saar statute is not based upon bilateral agreements between France and the Saar government but upon common agreement among the three western powers.

MOVIE TOUGH GUY GETS 5 DAYS FOR TARDINESS AT TRIAL

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 4 (AP)—Actor Lawrence Tierney was sentenced to five days in jail for contempt of court yesterday.

Municipal Judge Joseph Call ordered the movie tough guy jailed because Tierney appeared several hours late for trial on a battery charge. A bench warrant had been issued for his arrest.

"Sorry I was late," Tierney said, "but my car battery went dead and I got a traffic ticket on my way down here."

"You're being treated this as a joke," said the judge, "but you're not going to be tried when you feel good and ready; you're going to be tried on the date set by the court."

Tierney's trial on the battery charge was reset for Aug. 13. He was ordered to post bail of $2500 when he ends his five-day term. Tierney is accused of striking John Naylor last June 21. Naylor identified Tierney as one of the men who beat him when he investigated noises around his home at 5:30 a.m.

well (Rep.) of St. Louis, member of the Missouri delegation accompanying the committee, expressed the hope that "the diversity of opinion will not prevent proponents of the Pick-Sloan plan on the one hand and of MVA on the other from giving us a united program on which we can base some immediate legislation at the current session of Congress."

The Congressmen were to be guests of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon today at the Missouri Athletic Club, after which they are to be taken to the riverfront area for a look at flood damage. They will leave at 12:15 a.m. tomorrow for Kansas City.

Opera for Congressmen.

The St. Louis Flood Control Association, which favors a federal levee and pressurized sewer project for this city, will host this evening at a dinner at Hotel Chase. Afterwards the Congressmen will attend the Municipal Opera performance of "The Bohemian Girl."

Arriving at Kansas City tomorrow, the committee members will tour devastated areas there and take an automobile trip along the Kaw river through Lawrence to Topeka, where they will spend the night. Representative Edward H. Rees (Rep.) of Kansas will join the group at Topeka.

On Monday the legislators will conduct a public hearing at the Kansas state capitol in Topeka, then drive to Manhattan, Kan., and other damaged areas before returning to Kansas City to board a train for the return trip to Washington.

PERONISTA RADIO ASSAILS LA NACION SILENCE IN STRIKE

The radio blasted La Nacion for failing to join the pro-government press in denouncing Aug. 1 bombings on Argentine state-owned railways as alien-inspired.

A campaign directed against La Prensa for its alleged silence on a railway strike last January preceded the Government's closing of that newspaper. The pro-government press assailed both La Prensa and La Nacion at the time for their "tendentious" reporting of the strike.

The official attack on La Nacion today came as hundreds of striking engineers and firemen refused to obey a government order directing them to return to work.

REJECT DRUCKER FOR JUDGESHIP, DOUGLAS URGES

Bureau of Investigation report on Drucker and found "not one word of blemish of any kind or description." McCarran again raised the possibility of a compromise, saying the fight was "regrettable" and he hoped "something can be worked out amicably and fairly between the President and the Senator."

Douglas, however, repeated he is "standing" on his own candidates because they are "best qualified."

The Associated Press reported that McCarran told Drucker that precedent is against his confirmation. McCarran strongly hinted that the subcommittee would back up Douglas.

'Religious Issue'
After the hearing, Douglas was asked by a reporter to comment on the "religious issue." This referred to Douglas's selections of a Protestant, Catholic and Jew for the federal bench and the Chicago Bar Association ballot which bracketed Truman's and Douglas's Catholic and Jewish candidates together.

Douglas said he "hopes the time will come when the melting pot will have worked sufficiently so that these factors may not be taken into consideration. But that time is not yet." He said the diverse groups which compose the country must be represented on the federal bench so that each group may feel "fully protected and may fully share in the life of the community."

When Douglas had completed his statement, he turned and shook hands with Drucker, who was waiting to testify.

McCarran made public a resolution adopted by the St. Clair County (Ill.) Democratic Club which said its members "bitterly resent" any slight or injury to Douglas.

The resolution asked that the Drucker nomination be rejected.

Douglas also opposes the President's choice for a second bench vacancy, Cornelius J. Harrington, but the hearing today concerned only Drucker.

Yesterday's hearing on Harrington was postponed until Aug. 10, suggesting the possibility to some observers that a compromise might be in the offing.

Theory on Compromise.
Reports circulated that Truman might be willing to withdraw Drucker's name and substitute that of Epstein, one of the men recommended by Douglas, in return for the Senator's endorsement of Harrington. The President then would offer Drucker another federal job, according to this theory.

Douglas, however, in talking to reporters, repeated that he considers Epstein and his other judge choice, William H. King Jr., to have superior qualifications to those of Drucker and Harrington. He said he is sticking to his original recommendations.

McCarran and the subcommittee quickly finished yesterday with testimony on Joseph Sam Perry, the only one of the President's nominations for three Chicago bench vacancies which Douglas supported.

Douglas testified the Wheaton (Ill.) lawyer is "well qualified" for the bench and "personally satisfactory to me."

TRUMAN SIGNS HOUSING MEASURE FOR FLOOD RELIEF

Also Allocates $2,000,000 Extra to Home Finance Agency for Use in Kansas.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (UP)—President Truman yesterday signed legislation for emergency housing aid to flood victims in Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma. He also allocated an extra $2,000,000 to the Housing and Home Finance Agency for relief in Kansas.

The new law provides that the Government will insure mortgages at 100 per cent instead of 95 per cent and authorizes the Government to provide emergency housing facilities.

The new funds for Kansas brought to $3,275,000 the amount so far allocated to that state in the present emergency.

Meanwhile, the Defense Transportation Administration reported that the floods have aggravated an already serious shortage of box cars needed for moving the grain harvest. The agency said that 7000 cars on the flood areas must be cleaned and repaired before they can be used again.

The prolonged wet period before the floods delayed the southwest harvest, the agency said, with the result that grain is now moving at the same time as it is hoisted in the northern states.

CONGRESS INQUIRY INTO WEST POINT FOOTBALL URGED

ing outside help to pass classroom tests during the last few years. Senators said they were told 80 of the cadets had admitted breaking the honor code and that the school probably would face a court-martial or special trial to determine the guilt.

The Army withheld the names of those dismissed to protect the men's futures. The dismissals were made as "general discharge" rather than dishonorable discharge which carries much greater stigma.

An Army spokesman said it was the honor system itself which exposed the cheaters. The action was taken by the Army about six months ago by the cadets' own 25-man honor committee after a tip from an unidentified cadet.

Findings Given Special Board.
The committee's findings were passed on to a special board appointed by Collins. It was composed of Judge Learned Hand, recently retired from the United States Court of Appeals in New York; Lt. Gen. Troy H. Middleton, now president of Louisiana State University; and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, retired, a former president of the West Point Graduates Association.

Then, yesterday, Collins called a meeting at the Pentagon of House Speaker Rayburn (Dem., Texas), and a small group of hurriedly assembled Senators. Collins was reported as "badly broken up" as he gave out the news.

About 1800 to 1700 cadets now at West Point were said to have been stunned by the action. The academy has a total enrollment of 2520.

SINATRA, ACTRESS FLY TO ACAPULCO, TOUR NIGHT SPOTS
ACAPULCO, Mexico, Aug. 4 (AP)—Frank Sinatra and Ava Gardner flew to Acapulco from Mexico City yesterday, and last night they took in the night spots.

The vacationing couple put in an early afternoon at La Perla, perched on the cliffs overlooking the sea at the Hotel Mirador. They went on to others with Hedy Lamarr and her recently acquired husband, Teddy Straufer, who came to La Perla.

The singer and the actress flew here in the private plane of millionaire importer and sportsman, Jorge Pasquel. They checked in at the swank Hotel Reforma Casablanca, on another bluff overlooking the harbor.

Sinatra said his estranged wife, Nancy, is getting a California divorce, and then he and Miss Gardner will marry.

The pair flew here from Los Angeles Wednesday. They plan to return next week.

TOKYO, Aug. 4 (AP)—The Army's policy of rotating its personnel in Korea back to the United States will be extended Sept. 1 to include all soldiers in the Far East Command, Brig. Gen. Bryan L. Milburn, assistant chief of staff, announced today.

Soldiers in Korea have been eligible for rotation after serving a minimum of six months in close combat.

Milburn said enlisted personnel in Korea who met minimum requirements before June 1 will be returned home. If possible, prior to Sept. 1. Officers in this latter group, he added, will be rotated as soon as possible but not necessarily before the expanded program becomes effective.

50 Red German Youth Delegates Desert to West on Eve of Festival

Cross Over From East Berlin Despite Roadblocks and Communist Police Patrols—Many More Expected.

BERLIN, Aug. 4 (AP)—Troubles began today for the Communist "third world youth festival for peace" in East Berlin when some of its delegates deserted to the West even before the show's formal opening tomorrow.

Fifty blue-shirted young East German Communists came over to Allied West Berlin to ask about asylum, western youth organizations reported.

They were the first of what observers expect to be a substantial stream during the two-week festival.

The youths came over despite the road barricades and heavy police patrols established at sector borders by Communist police to keep them on their East Berlin reservations.

A stream of Communist propaganda has been warning the festival delegates to avoid the "man-traps of Imperialist West Berlin."

West Berlin's youth organizations—whose facilities were taxed for their guests—Foreign delegates got the best quarters and food and the young Germans had to take the leaveings.

Although rooms were regulated in thousands of private homes, tens of thousands of youths had to be bedded down in factories, schools, stadiums and tent cities.

LONE BIDDER BUYS VIRGINIA HILL'S HOUSE FOR $30,237

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 4 (AP)—A salesman bought Virginia Hill's fancy house for $30,237 yesterday, ending a government auction of her property here. The salesman, Jack M. Vertrees, was the only bidder for the place, valued at $35,000.

Actually, the Government got only $14,750 in the deal. That is $250 more than she had in it. Vertrees assumes a $15,487 mortgage. Thus, the Internal Revenue Bureau picked up just $30,000 of the $161,000 income tax bill it filed against the former fiancée of the late gangster Benjamin ("Bugs") Siegel. Items ranging from garbages cars to milk cans and ash trays to sterling silver brought in $15,000 at the auction Thursday on the front lawn of her house.

Miss Hill is now down to a Cadillac and a Lincoln sedan. They, too, have been seized, the Cadillac in San Francisco, the station wagon in New York. The two cars are registered in her husband's name. He is Hans Hauser, an Austrian ski instructor ordered out of the country because he overstayed his visitor's permit. He and his infant son are in Chile. That's where Virginia plans to go when the Government approves.

NEW MILITARY WOE: ARMY STUCK WITH 3370 BALL BATS
FORT MEADE, Md., Aug. 4 (AP)—It came out the other day that the Navy has 10,693 dozen silver-plated oyster forks. 10,442 dozen of an inferior type wouldn't be except in an emergency, said an admiral.

Yesterday, Second Army headquarters reported it is "with 3370 baseball bats."

"A lot of the equipment accumulated in the days just following the last war," explained Col. E. M. Shine, special services officer. "There was a big cry for athletic equipment to keep soldiers busy between the end of the war and the time they were discharged."

The Army is growing again, so can't they be used?

They've got dry rot, said the colonel, and even the soldier baseball players complain.

"Some of them probably would make good potato mashers," agreed Col. Shine. "I would even like to have some of them myself for a small fence in my back yard. But we can't give them away. Under the regulations this equipment must be auctioned."

OATIS CASE AIMED AT FREE PRESS, PUBLISHERS SAY
NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP)—Directors of the American Newspaper Publishers Association said yesterday that the imprisonment in Czechoslovakia of Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis is "one more effort" by Communist countries "to destroy freedom of the press."

In a resolution adopted by its board of directors, the A.N.P.A. termed the trial of Oatis for espionage a "travesty of justice" and said it should "serve as a dire warning to all free people of the ruthless nature of Communist countries."

Oatis was sentenced to 10 years in prison.

"This was not, in fact, the trial and conviction of a newspaper man," but was actually one more effort on the part of Communist countries to destroy freedom of the press for a free people.

The resolutions said Oatis had a "record of integrity, competence and accuracy" and that his "guilt" consisted of reporting established facts and developments in the country to which he had been assigned.

ANTI-RED AGENTS INFILTRATED ARMY, POLE TESTIFIES

Top Information Relayed to West Through U.S., British Embassies, Officer Charges.

WARSAW, Aug. 4 (UP)—Anti-Communist agents homebased in Poland's army even at the highest levels as late as 1949, one of nine Polish officers charged with treason and espionage testified last night.

That was the year Polish-born Soviet Marshal Konstantin Rokossovsky took command of Poland's armed forces in a drastic shake-up.

Maj. Wladyslaw Roman detailed the workings of the alleged spy network. The court president was forced to rap his gavel often for silence.

The youthful looking defendant said top information was relayed to the West through the British and American embassies.

Lesser information went by a longer route involving the Polish military attaché in London, he said.

Col. Stanislaw Nowicki testified yesterday that a British embassy secretary was one of the channels for funneling information out of Poland.

Nowicki, fourth of the defendants to plead guilty, said Lewis Massey, then secretary of the British embassy in Warsaw, sent five reports through the diplomatic mail to a woman contact in London.

Massey is still in the embassy here. He was mentioned earlier in the trial as having contact with the main defendant, Maj. Gen. Stanislaw Tatar.

Nowicki was visibly nervous, mopping his brow and stammering under cross-examination.

Earlier, the defendant revealed he was arrested at about the time Rokossovsky took command of Poland's armed forces. The disclosure came from Col. Marian Ulrik, wartime army chief in London of Polish underground activities. Like the other defendants, he admitted his anti-Communist army faction split for western powers.

HIGH COURT ASKED TO REVIEW RULING AGAINST BUS RADIO

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP)—The Supreme Court was asked yesterday to review a lower court decision that streetcar and bus riders have a constitutional right not to have to listen to commercial radio broadcasts while they ride.

The appeal was filed by Washington Transit Radio, Inc., WTRC-PM, The Capital Transit Co. and the District of Columbia Commission of the District of Columbia.

In a unanimous decision the United States Court of Appeals held on June 1 that radio broadcasts as heard on streetcars and buses have a constitutional right not to have to listen to commercial radio broadcasts while they ride.

NEW WAGE BOARD PLAN MAY CAUSE FRESH PRESSURE TO CURB PRICES

Proposed Regulation, if Approved by Johnson, Will Link Pay Increases More Directly to Cost of Living.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4 (AP)—A new wage control regulation linking pay increases more directly to the cost of living has been approved unanimously by the War Relocation Authority.

The board action, announced yesterday, sends the proposed new wage program to Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston (Johnston, in Spokane, Wash., on private business, had "no comment at this time." He said he wants to see a written draft of the proposal first. Asked if the suggestion was new to him, he said, "Not exactly." Johnston is in Spokane to attend a board meeting of a brick company he heads. He will fly back to Washington tomorrow.)

Possible Effect on Prices. The result of such a program, if approved by Johnston, may be to apply new pressures on business and industry to hold down prices.

The WSB proposed that cost-of-living pay increases be permitted generally, wherever an employer and his workers agree on them.

These increases, sometimes called escalator arrangements, are geared to ups and downs of the Government's cost-of-living index. They have been used officially to workers in unions which had escalator clauses in contracts made prior to the January wage-price "freeze."

Under the new proposal, almost any worker could have his pay increased in ratio to the way his living costs climb, if his boss agreed. Non-union, as well as union workers could negotiate for a boost.

The WSB chairman, George W. Taylor, termed the proposal a major decision. If the price line can be held, he added, wages automatically would be stabilized.

Easing of Freeze, Some Say. On the other hand, some union leaders and government officials close to the subject said privately today that the board's proposal amounts to easing last January's wage freeze. These officials predicted quick approval of new escalator agreements between industry and workers.

Up to now the wage board has given blanket approval only to a 10 percent wage hike over 1950, levels or to cost of living increases agreed to before the wage freeze.

The new proposal would (a) allow the old contracts, with pay adjustments every three months, to go on indefinitely; (b) permit employers to make new agreements on the same principle; (c) allow employers to reopen contracts or agreements periodically to grant catch-up wage increases. The board, however, wants to approve the new agreements.

Decision in Textile Case. The board yesterday offered Johnston a sort of "Exhibit A" in the form of a decision based on its proposed new policy in the Northern cotton-rayon textile case. The board had negotiated a new agreement with the industry for a 7 1/2 percent wage increase for more than 100,000 employees.

Emil Rieve, head of the union and a member of the board, announced that the board was ready to approve a cost-of-living boost of 6 1/2 percent, amounting to about 9 cents an hour, but side-tracked the so-called fringe issues such as health and welfare insurance.

The 6 1/2 percent represented about the amount of pay advances received by about 30,000 New England workers who have contracts with escalator clauses before the wage freeze.

ROY J. McDERMOTT NAMED TO TRANSPORTATION GROUP

Appointment of members of the new Metropolitan Mass Transportation Commission was completed yesterday when Mayor Joseph M. Darst announced the selection of Roy J. McDermott as a member.

Ten of the 20 members of the commission were selected by Mayor Darst and the other 10 by County Supervisor Luman F. Matthews. Names of the other 19 members were announced earlier. McDermott is general passenger agent and traffic manager of the Missouri Pacific railroad.

Truman's Sister Helps Woman Here Observe 101st Birthday

MISS MARY JANE TRUMAN, sister of President Truman, visiting her 101st birthday celebration with Mrs. Belle Hazell Dean on her 101st birthday yesterday.

Visit by Head of Missouri Eastern Star Follows President's Letter of Congratulation to Centenarian.

Miss Mary Jane Truman, sister of the President, helped Mrs. Belle Hazell Dean celebrate her 101st birthday yesterday at the Masonic Home of Missouri, 5351 Delmar boulevard, where she has lived since 1925.

Miss Truman, worthy grandmatron of the Order of the Eastern Star of Missouri, aided Mrs. Dean in cutting her birthday cake.

The visit from Miss Truman followed a letter from President Truman saying that "to pass the century mark of life is a privilege not vouchsafed to many, and I am happy to join with your friends in extending good wishes to you on your 101st birthday."

The centenarian expressed delight at the celebration, the letters and telegrams of congratulation and the decorated cake, which bore the numerals "101" in the center. The cake had 11 candles, one for each decade and one for the extra year.

CHARGES THEFT IN YEAR OF $30,000 IN TOBACCO

East St. Louis Wholesaler Sues Insurance Firm to Recover Loss.

Systematic theft of $30,000 worth of tobacco, mostly cigarettes, from the East St. Louis store of the Peter Hauptmann Tobacco Co., a wholesale firm, in a year's time, was charged yesterday in a suit filed in circuit court.

The suit seeks to collect $25,000 from the Continental Casualty Co., 111 North Fourth street, on policy insuring the tobacco company against loss by fraud or dishonesty of employees. Also sought is $2500 for "vexatious delay" growing out of the insurance company's rejection of the claim, and $8333 in attorney's fees.

Erwin Harms, president of the tobacco firm, said the thefts, uncovered in an inventory, occurred between June 1, 1949, and Aug. 30, 1950, at the store at 707 Missouri avenue. He said identity of employees who took the tobacco had not been determined. The company also operates a store at 611 Chouteau avenue.

TEACHER ACTIVE IN REFRONT AFFILIATE FIRED

Dismissed For Reasons Considered Sufficient by Board, School Official Says.

Brockman Schumacher, chairman of a meeting sponsored by the St. Louis Peace Committee last Saturday night, has been fired as a teacher in the veterans' training program conducted by the Board of Education at Vashon High School, it was learned yesterday.

Edward H. Beumer, assistant superintendent of instruction and presently acting superintendent, said, "Schumacher's service was terminated for reasons considered by the Board of Education to be sufficient."

While Beumer would not amplify his statement on the reasons for the step, it is known that the Peace Committee circulated the Communist-inspired Stockholm peace petition in St. Louis and is affiliated with the American Peace Crusade, which has been denounced by the State Department as following the Communist line in its peace endeavors.

Temporary Teacher.

Since Schumacher, a Negro, was regarded as a temporary teacher by the board, he had no contract and tenure and could be dismissed without a hearing. The local office of the Veterans Administration, which reimburses the board for salaries it pays teachers in the veterans' program, was notified of the firing.

Schumacher, who lives at 793 Aubert avenue, declined to comment on his dismissal. He is 27 years old, a graduate of the University of Iowa and served two years in the Army in World War I. He is teaching subject in the veterans' program was remedial reading.

He has denied reports that the Peace Committee solicited funds from families of servicemen in Korea.

SUIT TO SET ASIDE WOMAN'S WILL FILED FOR GRANDSON, 7

Suit to set aside the will of Mrs. Rebecca C. Lortz, widow of a Fulton Iron Works executive, was filed yesterday in circuit court in behalf of her 7-year-old grandson, whose father, now dead, had been named one of the four beneficiaries of the will.

The grandson, Edward Krenning Lortz, son of Mrs. Ambrose E. Lortz, 8015 Dayton drive, Clayton, charged that his grandfather was under undue influence and incapable of managing her affairs when she made out her will in 1947. He asked the court to determine his interest in the $239,206 estate left by Mrs. Lortz, who died last September, at 83.

The handwritten will left the estate in equal shares to three sons, Adrian, Russell and Ambrose Lortz, father and a daughter, Mrs. Edna Lortz MacIntyre, with the provision that if any of the beneficiaries died before her, the estate was to be divided among the survivors. Ambrose died in 1949.

Mrs. Rebecca Lortz, 5615 Lindell boulevard, was the widow of L. Edward Lortz, executive vice president of the iron works. Named as defendants in the suit are the beneficiaries and their children.

WARRANTS OUT AGAINST 16 IN DELINQUENCY OF GIRL

Warrants have been issued charging 16 youths and men with disorderly conduct and contributing to the delinquency of a 14-year-old girl. Police Magistrate David W. Killinger of Collinsville announced yesterday.

The action was taken after the girl's mother filed complaints against 28 persons for alleged misconduct in the last two years. Some of the men are married, Killinger said.

State's Attorney Austin Lewis of Madison county said he is conducting an investigation to determine if the complaints would justify issuance of warrants charging statutory rape.

TUCKER FATALITY HURT IN 55-FOOT FALL FROM ROOF

Richard Davis, a tuckpointer, died yesterday at a City Hospital of injuries suffered earlier in the day when he fell 55 feet from the roof of a six-story building being constructed at Ninth and Carr streets as part of the Cochran Gardens public housing project.

Davis, 47 years old, had been washing down the roof of the building. He was pulling up boards on a pulley at the edge of the roof when he lost his balance and fell. He lived at 5746 Labadie avenue.

Wires Crime Group Those Who Linked Him to $1,000,000 Exchange Must Be Revealed

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 4 (AP)—Ambassador William O'Dwyer demanded last night that the Senate Crime Investigating Committee expose "the forces" which linked his name to a $1,000,000 fund transfer.

The committee issued a statement in Washington earlier yesterday saying it was satisfied with a State Department explanation that the transfer was a routine payment by Mexico to the United States on its lend-lease account.

The reports, first published by the New York Daily News, said the committee was investigating a $1,000,000 letter of credit "reportedly transferred from Mexico to a Manhattan bank for the account of Ambassador O'Dwyer," shortly before the committee opened televised hearings in New York last March.

The State Department said that what happened was that the Mexican government made out a $1,000,000 bank draft to O'Dwyer, in his capacity as American Ambassador, for payment on its lend-lease account.

O'DWYER DEMANDS EXPOSURE OF FUND STORY 'FORCES'

The department said O'Dwyer asked that the draft be changed into its equivalent in pesos to be used for American diplomatic expenses in Mexico. The money was then given to the credit of the United States government in the Mexico City branch of the National City Bank of New York.

The transaction was said to be in accord with "accepted practice in such cases."

O'Dwyer wired the crime committee: "The recent despicable lie imputing irregularities in my private affairs unfortunately is not without the participation of your committee. The visit of your chief counsel to interview me on this subject was approved by your committee on information which was deemed by you adequate and reliable. The newspaper stories appeared while he was in Mexico."

"The forces that started this story and interested you in it and procured its circulation cannot be permitted to remain shrouded in mystery. I demand that your committee expose these forces without delay."

The chief counsel referred to, Richard Moser, returned to Washington Thursday after talking with O'Dwyer in Mexico.

Scientist, Facing Prosecution, Kills Himself With Snake Venom

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Aug. 4 (AP)—A world famous scientist, threatened with prosecution for mishandling University of Michigan funds, killed himself with a hypodermic dose of snake venom and morphine last night.

Three hours before his suicide, Dr. Malcolm H. Soule, a bacteriologist, was told by university regents he had been fired and would be prosecuted.

Washburn county prosecutor Douglas K. Reading said today his office was "through with the case unless anything further is turned up by the university."

Dr. Soule, 54 years old, has been a member of the faculty since 1919 and chairman of the department since 1935.

The regents told Dr. Soule at 3 p.m. they would not accept his resignation, submitted July 13. The prosecutor's office was asked at 4:30 p.m. to begin an investigation.

About 6 p.m. Dr. Soule's wife, Alma, found him lying in the basement of their home. He had given himself the fatal injection. In practically his last conscious breath he told his wife it was useless to call for help because "there is no known antidote for this snake venom."

Dr. Soule apparently had picked the venom up on one of his trips into tropical countries in his research on leprosy and other diseases.

St. Louis Guardsmen View Mock Air Attack With Bombs, Napalm

138th Infantry Among Units on Parade at Camp Ripley—Tank Exercises Next Week.

By THEODORE F. WAGNER, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CAMP RIPLEY, Minn., Aug. 4—A fiery demonstration of air support of ground troops was given members of the Thirty-fifth Division, Missouri-Kansas National Guard, by a joint air-ground instruction team here late yesterday.

Included among troops watching the demonstration from a hill in the rear of the camp were members of the 138th Infantry from St. Louis. Twelve F-51 planes of the 140th Fighter Bomber Group, Buckley Field, Colo., conducted the demonstration.

Responding to a radio request for air support, four planes of the team dive-bombed a target with 250-pound general purpose bombs. As each pilot pulled out of his dive, he released two bombs which exploded on the target, creating a huge billow of smoke and dust followed, as the plane pulled up in a sharp climb.

Napalm Bombs. The second flight of four fighters carried two 110-pound napalm bombs which were dropped into targets representing buildings. Each bomb contained 90 gallons of gasoline and 20 pounds of napalm jelly and the effect of the explosions was both hot and smoky. Little imagination was required to visualize the effects of such treatment on enemy troops.

Third on the list of aerial pyrotechnics was a flight of four planes in which four rockets, seen only as flashes of swift fire, darted from each diving fighter. Rockets crashed into a target with a sharp and destructive explosion. The demonstration concluded with the planes laying a white smoke screen across the artillery impact area.

Earlier in the afternoon, the 9000 National Guardsmen paraded before Gov. Edward F. Arn of Kansas and other dignitaries. Gov. Forrest Nelson was invited but failed to appear. Reasons for his absence were vague, ranging from an attack of hay fever to a speaking engagement. State Senator William E. Hillman of St.

Louis was in the group on the review stand. The review was led by Brig. Gen. Howard Searle, Topeka, Kan., assistant division commander, the three regiments of the division and attached units marched in perfect step under sunny skies. Gold-braided national and regimental colors whipped in the breeze as the solid lines of men in khaki stepped out to music by the Thirty-fifth Division band. Regiments on parade were the 138th, the 140th from Southeast Missouri, and the 137th from Kansas.

Artillery units, dragging 105 and 155 howitzers behind trucks and prime movers followed the marching men. Gun crews sat at stiff attention, with arms rigidly folded when passing in review. Division liaison planes flew low overhead.

The parade formation opened with presentation by Gov. Arn of the National Guard Bureau's Eisenhower trophy to the service battery, 154th Field Artillery Battalion, Troy, Kan., for excellence and efficiency in the last year.

Two-Day Holiday. Today and tomorrow are holidays, with the guardsmen being taken on recreation trips to lakes in the nearby Minnesota resort area. In addition to the escorted trips, passes were issued for visits to Minneapolis and other communities.

On Monday the guardsmen will begin a series of field problems culminating next Thursday in tank-led attacks on "enemy-held" positions. The three battalions of the 138th Infantry will follow tanks through corn fields in an assault on high ground, which they will then consolidate and hold.

Part of the field problem will be conducted at night and the "enemy" will be present in the form of a special force of "aggressors." The "aggressors," dressed in foreign uniforms, will be liberally supplied with blank ammunition, demolitions and fire crackers.

Borrowing from the Chinese Communists and the North Koreans, the aggressors this year will use huggies and whistles to add to the din and confusion. Effects of such night tactics will be watched closely by regular Army instructors overseeing the field work.

DEAF GIRL, 6, GOES ON WILD PLANE RIDE IN HOPE FOR CURE

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (UP)—The parents of a 6-year-old deaf mute girl prayed today that the shocking effect of a wild airplane ride will cure their child's deafness.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Michalovic were with hope and pity yesterday while their terrified daughter Barbara was bundled into a small two-place airplane for a hair-raising 25-minute ride.

The plane climbed to 4000 feet, leveled off and then went into a series of flat spins. Pilot Ed Lyons said Barbara at first covered in fear in the cockpit but later gained courage and laughed delightedly as the plane wheeled.

Dr. Nathan Somberg said the results of such treatment are not apparent for days. Often a series of flights is necessary, he said.

SUPPLY WAREHOUSE STRIKE MAY CURTAIL PHONE REPAIRS

There is a possibility there will be a cutback in telephone installations and repairs unless striking Western Electric Co. employees return to work at the company's supply warehouse, 4240 Duncan avenue, over the weekend, a company spokesman said today.

Western Electric supplies telephones and repair materials to Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., with which it is affiliated.

Employees of Western Electric warehouse employees left their jobs last Tuesday in a dispute with the company over the suspension of one employee. The employee refused to do certain work assigned to him.

Local 11803 of the CIO Communications Workers of America contended that the company had violated the job classification provisions of its contract by assigning the work.

Wesley Clifton Adams, an attorney, was found dead yesterday in his home at 367A Connecticut street, shot twice in the abdomen. A pistol was on the floor near the body.

Charles Adams discovered his brother's body shortly after a woman living downstairs reported hearing shots. Charles told police his brother had been despondent and in ill health recently.

MOTORCYCLE RIDER IS KILLED IN CRASH

St. Louisan's Machine Rins Into Ditch North of Poplar Bluff.

William Ray Lewis, 2218 North Eleventh street, was killed last night when the motorcycle he was riding careened into a ditch along U.S. Highway 67 north of Poplar Bluff. He was 27 years old.

His brother, James, 17, who also was on the motorcycle, suffered a leg injury in the accident, but was not hurt seriously, the Missouri State Highway Patrol at Poplar Bluff said.

Witnesses said the motorcycle was forced off the road by an automobile which continued on. The brothers, who lived together in St. Louis, were going south, on their way to visit their parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lewis, who live near Poplar Bluff. It was reported they were employed by the Midwest Mower Corp. here.

Five St. Louisans Hurt When Auto Overturns. Five St. Louisans were injured last night when an automobile driven by James Santo, 1201 McCormick avenue, Richmond Heights, overturned after being forced off "S. Highway 66, two miles north of Dwight, Ill.

Most seriously injured were Santo, who suffered a brain concussion, and Harlan Radinsky, 1478A Clara avenue, who suffered a broken leg. Both were taken to Dwight Memorial Hospital. Santo is a packinghouse chemist and Radinsky, a college student, is a city playground supervisor.

The other passengers were treated for minor injuries and released. They were Harold Lisk, Harry Back and Richard Helgas. Lisk lives at 5915 Washington boulevard.

WOMAN IS SAID TO ADMIT AIDING JAILBREAK ATTEMPT

Mrs. Theresa Boyd, wife of Kenneth Boyd, who attempted to break out of City Jail July 28, yesterday admitted supplying hand saw blades used by her husband and other prisoners to cut bars on a fifth-floor window, police reported.

Mrs. Boyd, a Negro, said she bought the blades at her husband's request. She said she went to the Market street side of the jail the night of July 27 and, after seeing a lighted match signal, tied the blades to a piece of string dropped to her by Curly Holland, one of the five Negroes who attempted to escape.

Mrs. Boyd was arrested immediately following the attempted jailbreak, but denied helping her husband

Chemical Guinea Pigs

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
I read with interest your article, "Chemistry Dons the Chef's White Cap," in which Mr. Paul Logue says, "Of course, chemicals, like anything else, can cause trouble if improperly used." Then he cites the extreme example of the girl who died from eating too much salt.

What he neglected to mention was the appalling amounts of chemicals, whose use by us is either known to be injurious or whose effect has not yet been tested, which we are unknowingly consuming in most of the commercial foods we buy in the stores today.

In the hearings now going on before a House committee in Washington, Dr. Francis E. Ray, director of the cancer research laboratory of the University of Florida, stated that chemicals may be a direct or contributory factor in initiating cancer or tumor formation. He went on to say that about a hundred chemicals have shown cancer-producing properties, among them arsenic.

In the United States alone 80,000,000 pounds of arsenicals are used annually as pesticides with, as yet, unknown effect on the national health. In addition 30,000 bakers use 10,000,000 pounds of chemical materials in producing five to six billion pounds of bread a year.

The proposed legislation to alter the food and drug laws to control the alarming use of chemicals in our foods is of such importance that it is being vigorously supported by the American Cancer Society. And vigorously opposed by food and drug manufacturers.

Mr. Logue states that man has improved on his two legs by building an airplane. When man boards an airplane, however, he does it of his own volition, and the risk of doing so is his own. In the tremendous quantities of chemicals we, as a nation, consume every day, the risk is forced upon us. At the moment we are chemical guinea pigs—but we are not happy ones.

Senator Kem Replies

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
An editorial in your newspaper dated June 21, concerning the Kem Amendment to cut off Marshall Plan aid to countries selling strategic materials to Russia and its satellites had this to say: "It ought to be a little embarrassing to Missouri's James P. Kem, that indefatigable explorer of the high cost of government, to discover that an amendment he sponsored bids fair to increase the burden of American taxpayers."

The editorial then commented on the fact High Commissioner John McCloy says that the result of my amendment would be "delay in West German economic recovery and more American dollars to keep West Germany afloat."

It is true that I have always tried to cut non-defense spending to the bone. I shall continue to do so. But never have I been willing to urge economies where the blood of the young men of America is involved. The issue your newspaper raises is one between human rights and property rights. I am on the side of human rights. I am entirely willing to sacrifice European profits and European trade in order to save the blood of American boys in Korea.

If it costs us some money to prevent our young men from being killed and maimed by weapons provided in whole or in part by our allies, I am willing to pay the price.

Fun for Taxpayers

Ready-Made Passengers

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
The section of the city where I live is trying to get bus service. A mass meeting has been held and a lot of people told how hard it is to get along without buses, or walk a couple of miles to the nearest line, or of kids walking to school for a mile or so over Morganford road, which doesn't even boast a sidewalk, and men on late shifts who have to do without the poor service which exists part of the day.

Public Service IS NOT getting fares in this area! Transportation money here is going into individual autos! A little bit goes into cabs and a little into the fare boxes, very little. Here's a fast growing district already choked with people who want to go some place when someone else already has the family car; people who are tired of driving to work with all its drawbacks; people tired of getting up an hour early to ride with a neighbor.

REET THOMAS.

Illegal and Indecent

Reading the report on Senator John Marshall Butler's campaign in Maryland is like walking through a political sewer, a sewer under Rat Alley. The Senate subcommittee which wrote the report found Butler and his campaign, including Senator McCarthy of Wisconsin, had used tactics so despicable that they "are destroying our system of free elections and undermining the very foundations of our government."

Yet the subcommittee, it seems to us, did not follow its findings to their logical conclusion, the unseating of Butler. Even though the Senate is the constitutional judge of the fitness of its members, the subcommittee found the law too vague to support drastic punishment. Instead, it suggested possible action by the Department of Justice and a strengthening of federal election statutes.

Further, it seems all too clear that Chairman Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, of the Rules Committee intends to pigeonhole the subcommittee report for the time being, instead of sending it to the floor of the Senate. But whatever the technical status of the report may be, every Senator knows what is in it. What happens as a result of this knowledge, if anything, will be a very genuine test of senatorial self-respect.

The tactics used in the Butler campaign were deliberately calculated to poison the collective mind of the electorate. To win an election by this unscrupulous device surely is even worse than the primitive methods of ghost-voting, ballot-box stuffing and vote stealing.

Perhaps the major finding of the subcommittee was that Mr. Butler gave the Chicago "public relations" man, Jon M. Jonkel, blanket authority to conduct his campaign, a campaign which was a persistent attack on the loyalty of Butler's opponent, former Senator Millard Tydings. Jonkel talked about creation of "the big doubt." Perhaps it would have been better to talk about "the big lie."

The "doubt" theme was developed in connection with Senator Tydings' investigation of Senator McCarthy's charge that Communists had infiltrated the Government. Jonkel, who already has been convicted of violating the Maryland election laws, admitted that he chose this method because it was easier to undermine Tydings by insinuation than it would have been to prove his investigation was a "whitewash."

Senator Butler, according to the subcommittee, was fully aware of many of the devices employed by Jonkel. He knew about the smearing campaign tabloid, From the Record. He never disavowed it. Further, he employed the McCormick-owned Washington Times-Herald's editorial writer, the man who supervised the publication of this scandal sheet, as his administrative assistant after taking his Senate seat. He knew also of the infamous composite photograph which purported to show Senator Tydings in close and earnest consultation with Communist Earl Browder.

Both federal and state laws were violated, according to the subcommittee, by publishing this tabloid in the name of the Young Democrats for Butler when, in fact, it was published and paid for by the Butler campaign headquarters. A serious violation of the law occurred when four Negroes were listed as the sponsors of another Butler campaign publication called "Back to Good Old Dixie."

Senator McCarthy was brought into the picture by the subcommittee's findings that the Wisconsin rable-rouser's staff was at the disposal of the Butler campaigners, and that out-of-state campaign contributions were channeled through his office. The subcommittee found that more than $75,000 was spent in the campaign although the legal federal limit was $14,168.96. Allowable deductions might possibly bring the total within the limit, but the subcommittee would like the Department of Justice to check the figures.

There is not space enough here for a full review of how the McCarthy and the McCormicks took over and ran the Butler campaign, of how they crossed state lines to elect a puppet to increase their influence in the high councils of the nation. Suffice it to say that the subcommittee found grounds enough for its alarm over the political use of defamation, a campaign weapon which "eats like acid at the whole fabric of American life."

Recommended legislation to outlaw such tactics, to provide for closer scrutiny of campaign contributions, and to tighten up the Federal Corrupt Practices Act certainly should be adopted.

But even the resolution to do all this still would leave the United States Senate face to face with the hard fact that one of its sitting members came to his seat by methods both indecent and illegal.

Clear Police Instructions

St. Louis has a good police force and knows it. The statement by the reorganized Police Board will help reassure the city that it will continue to enjoy effective police protection.

Under recent boards, the Police Department has modernized its records system and other equipment. It has established a Police Academy for training its men. It has recruited able officers. It has pursued gambling from one end of the city to the other, and has kept organized hoodlums and their rackets out of St. Louis.

Nothing should be done to disturb this steady progress, and the new president of the Police Board, Maurice G. Roberts, promises nothing will disturb it. There will be no shakeups. The officers are charged with enforcing the laws against gambling, vice and crime. "Your only obligation," Mr. Roberts told them, "is to the individual citizens of our community."

This is the kind of instruction the police understand. It is the kind of instruction the city expects—and expects to see in practice day after day.

1812 Serip, and Oil Besides

After the Revolutionary War, a number of more prosperous and far-sighted citizens bought up Continental currency, presumably "not worth a Continental," and held it until the new Government had to redeem some of it, as they knew it would. And now in somewhat the same tradition there is E. L. Cord, who used to devote his time to making an automobile with a front-wheel drive.

Representative Willis of Louisiana says a group led by Cord has been buying up old public land scrip issued to veterans of the War of 1812, Indian wars and the Civil War. Mr. Willis says the scrip buyers have filed applications for land off the shore of Louisiana, on the theory that it is public land, and also on the theory that it contains oil. In fact, the land claimed seems to surround oil wells already in operation.

All this has Congressman Willis, the Humble

Oil Co. and government lawyers in a tizzy, though Cord once tried the same scheme in California and failed. It is apparent that Congress never meant to entitle veterans to live on farms under the Gulf of Mexico, but Congress never said so. Maybe it will have to say so now—nobody seems to know for certain.

But the ironical thing about this scrip deal is that the Federal Government, which has domination over the offshore oil lands, has been struggling with the states, which demand the right to local exploitation of the oil. The House even passed a bill to give the states control, rejecting the dominant national interest. And now there is Mr. Cord's interest, riding betwixt and between in a streamlined front-wheel-drive speedster, carrying benefits obtained with muzzle-loading rifles.

It's a neat scheme, and all it needs is a coonskin cap and a proper amount of legal embalming.

Wages Tied to Living Costs

The new wage regulation unanimously proposed by the Wage Stabilization Board has been coming down the pike for a long time.

When Economic Stabilizer Eric Johnston last January approved an order permitting cost-of-living wage increases for those workers with escalator clauses in their contracts, it was clear that the same rule ultimately would have to be applied to workers with other kinds of contracts. This is what WSB now proposes to do. If its regulation is approved by Mr. Johnston, workers will be free to seek cost-of-living adjustments either through new escalator clauses or through wage reopening clauses.

Mr. Johnston's original order was temporary, and permitted cost-of-living raises only until June. WSB earlier this week extended the period indefinitely, and President Truman, signing the economic controls bill, said: "To the extent that this act permits prices and the cost of living to rise, it will be necessary to allow reasonable adjustments in wages."

What all this adds up to is a wage policy substantially different from that heretofore in effect. The temporary policy permitted wages to rise 10 per cent over January 1950, and to rise slightly more in the case of workers with cost-of-living contracts. Now wages generally are to be permitted to rise as far as the cost of living rises.

Will that mean built-in inflation? If every wage rise becomes the excuse for an ensuing price rise, of course it will.

This puts a more serious responsibility than ever on stabilization officials to check and restrain prices that are significant in the cost of living. If, despite the handicaps of the new controls bill, the consumer price index can be held fairly steady there will be no excuse for large general wage rises which inflate the volume of purchasing power.

Vigorous and effective price control remains the key to the whole problem. A defective bill must not be permitted to become the excuse for any other kind of price control than that.

Around a Table in Iran

British and Iranian oil negotiators have a long way to go before they can compose their bitter dispute, but merely bring the negotiators together represents a substantial triumph. Ambassador Harriman appears to have accomplished that at last, and a new note of optimism sounds both in London and in Iran.

Until the negotiators actually sit down at the same table, fingers must be kept crossed. Will the extremists in Iran permit a peaceful settlement of the dispute? There are elements for whom a settlement would represent defeat and disappointment, for then they could not profit from the disruption of Iran's economy which has followed the virtual stoppage of oil operations. Can Premier Mossadegh hold his country in line long enough for negotiations to be completed in good faith?

Certainly Iran's own best interests would be served by a peaceful settlement rather than a long stalemate. Tentative plans for the settlement appear to be extremely favorable to Iran. As these are shaping up, they are reported to call for British recognition of Iran's right to nationalize its oil resources. An Iranian company would take over ownership of these resources, and a new company jointly operated by Iran and the British would market and transport the oil, profits being shared probably on a 50-50 basis.

If such a settlement is reached, the West can congratulate itself on having got out of a crisis which at one time seemed certain to benefit the Soviet cause. Whereupon the West should take a vow not to let the next such crisis go so far before tackling its causes.

A Blow for Liberty in Britain

One of those typical British things, and his feat is being hailed as another in the long list of notable struggles for personal liberty.

Ever since the war, each Englishman has had an identity card and a registration number. It has been the habit of policemen on arresting citizens to ask for the number, and the police since 1941 have kept a file of all offenders according to their identity cards. Evidently this enables the police to catalogue speeders and other traffic offenders more effectively than by name.

Harry Willcock, described as a peppery little Yorkshireman with a ruddy face, was picked up for overtime parking, and asked to show his identity card. He told the policeman to present his compliments to the police superintendent "and tell him to go to hell."

The case went clear to the High Court, presided over by the Lord Chief Justice, and resulted in one of those typically British decisions. Mr. Willcock, the court held, must produce his identity card, but at the same time the court criticized as "wholly unreasonable" the police practice of demanding identity cards "from all and sundry."

At this distance it is hard to share the deep feeling of The Observer that requiring a motorist to reveal his registration number causes him to resemble "some slave-unit in a totalitarian state." Likewise the Marquess of Reading, who described the identity cards as "the symbol of regimentation," seemed to be overstating the case.

What is involved, we suspect, is just one more episode in the eternal dual between citizen and cop. Free peoples respect law, but they are always alert to prevent the cops from getting the upper hand. Free peoples believe that cops should be kept off balance, and should work under reasonable handicaps. Mr. Willcock was clearly outraged by an increase in police efficiency resulting from the accident of wartime regulations, and he has struck a blow for the noble cause of freedom to outwit the cops if one can get away with it.

Success Story of the G.I. Bill

The Mirror
Public Opinion

Manpower boss says educational training under G.I. Bill of Rights has helped America avoid serious shortage of skilled men during mobilization period; university heads agree on benefits; veterans not only learned but brought new ideas to college campus.

Chalmers M. Roberts in The Washington Post

July 25 marked the beginning of the end of one of America's most fascinating experiments in higher education, the G.I. Bill of Rights.

To qualify for training under the G.I. bill, a veteran had to be enrolled by July 25 or his free educational chances were over. There are a couple of exceptions, but only minor ones. Those already in training can, of course, continue as long as 1956, in fact.

But the cut-off date is good for an assessment of what the G.I. program has done to higher education. Here are the basic facts:

Out of 15,200,000 World War II veterans, 7,600,000 will have had some sort of training, courtesy of Uncle Sam's pocketbook. The cost: 12 billion dollars.

The net, it appears, is that just about as many young Americans will have gone to college as would have had there been no war. For while thousands had a chance at higher learning only because of Uncle Sam's generosity, almost as many more gave up their college plans.

Out of this change in timing—a sort of lumping together of college years in America—the nation has gained one great advantage: it has a vast crop of fresh-out-of-school trained manpower at the very moment when the mobilization program is demanding every trained man it can find.

More Democracy in Schools

Here, for example, is how Dr. Frank Graham, former university president and Senator and manpower boss, recently assessed the results of the G.I. Bill of Rights:

"The G.I. Bill of Rights has been a fine thing for two reasons: "First, it has brought more democracy in education at the highest level by helping many deserving youths to get to college. It has pointed up the need for a national scholarship program for outstanding but needy students."

"Second, it has provided America with a large amount of extra skilled manpower in a period of defense mobilization. While the G.I. program was conceived to give the individual veteran an educational break, it not only has done that but it also has given the country a tremendous break."

"We are only now, in this period of defense mobilization, beginning to see the enormity of this extra break for the nation. If America had not provided the G.I. Bill of Rights for its veterans, the skilled manpower situation today would be very much more desperate."

Incentive From Maturity

It will take a generation, perhaps, to properly assess this manpower bonanza and what it did for America.

The Washington Post asked officials of the metropolitan area's major universities to comment on the effects of the G.I. bill. Unanimously, they agreed that it had been a good thing, for education and nation.

Here are excerpts from their statements: Paul F. Douglass, president of American University:

"In terms of general performance, we have found that veterans have performed on the whole on about the same academic level as other students. From the standpoint of admissions, however, it has been shown that many men who did not do good work in high school found under the incentive of mature years and the spur of career preparation a greater drive and therefore demonstrated that a man can actually overcome secondary school weaknesses by high purposefulness. . . ."

Roy J. Deferrari, secretary general of Catholic University:

"By reason of the fact that these G.I.s had greater personal responsibilities at the moment and in the immediate future, they lent an air of greater seriousness to the intellectual life of the institution. . . . The G.I.s brought a spirit of 'get things done right and quick' to the campus."

The Very Rev. Hunter Guthrie, S.J., president of Georgetown University, made the point that "few realize that the G.I. bill was the master pump-priming it turned out to be." A check against postwar economic decline. "It had the effects," he said, "of a WPA and PWA without the political stigma attached to these."

New Blood, New Thought

Father Guthrie called the program a success, educationally speaking. He said the students benefited "not only by a supply of students who were not financially handicapped but also by a generally more mature level of students. . . . The G.I. put a real demand on the teaching staff by his broader experience and his refusal to take pat answers."

President Cloyd H. Marvin of George Washington University called the general effect of the program "good," and added: "Our pattern-of-course offerings and the make-up of our student bodies had become somewhat fixed. The influx of veteran students brought new blood, new ideas and demands for new courses and new programs. . . . Certainly we have learned from this experiment that too many young men were being barred from college because they did not have money."

President Mordecai W. Johnson of Howard University commented likewise on the serious attitude of G.I. students. But he said so many of them were enrolled at Howard that "the quality of instruction in the undergraduate division was injured," dropping the ratio of teachers to students from one teacher to 19 students to one to 25 (today's figure is down to one to 18). The president added:

"An Investment in Future"

"But there is no doubt the program had a substantially helpful influence in widening educational opportunities for Negro youth. It was a very wise program on the part of the Government."

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, declared that "there is not a college campus in America that will not be richer in its teaching and in its contributions to American life because the veterans left on the campuses something that will never be lost."

Dr. Byrd called the program "an investment in the future of America," a statement which seems to be the general feeling of all those who have had anything to do with the G.I. bill. Of course there were chiselers—the "learn-to-fly" racket got so far out of bounds that Congress killed it—but they were insignificant when the total score was added.

PASSENGERS CAN DREAM.

From the Louisville Times.
The suggestion is made that the Louisville Transit Co. base its fares on a zone system instead of a flat rate. The idea may or may not have merit. At least it is not novel. It made us think of some rhymes imbedded in a sketch Mark Twain wrote in the 1870s:

Conductor, when you receive a fare,
Punch in the presence of the passenger!
A blue trip slip for an eight-cent fare,
A buff trip slip for a six-cent fare,
A pink trip slip for a three-cent fare,
Punch in the presence of the passenger!

Chorus

Punch, brothers, punch with care!
Punch in the presence of the passenger!
To the current fare discussion in Louisville, this jingle has no value whatever. But there is no harm in a passenger's dreaming.

The Relevant Nietzsche

NIETZSCHE: PHILOSOPHER, PSYCHOLOGIST, ANTI-CHRIST, by Walter Kaufmann. (Princeton University Press, 407 pp., $4.)

Irvin Edman in The New York Times.

Any author of a new book on Nietzsche must write necessarily in the shadow of several Nietzsche legends; of the "blood-red ruthless destroyer," the nationalist legend of the twentieth-century imperialist exploiters of Nietzsche, the Nazi transformation of Nietzsche's philosophy into a racist myth. These are not the only difficulties faced by a serious student of this philosopher. Nietzsche was the least systematic of philosophers, though, as Mr. Kaufmann points out, that does not mean the least consistent.

Despite minor reservations, Mr. Kaufmann's study is illuminating. He plunges at once into the question of the Nietzsche legend. And he makes clear beyond peradventure what a shocking misfortune Nietzsche's reputation suffered because his works subsequent to his death were unscrupulously edited and controlled by a sister, Frau Forster, who seems to have been as far as possible in temperance with the report of her philosophical crudity and ignorance. Frau Forster Nietzsche was not only philosophically a boor, but she was married to a notorious anti-Semite and she herself was given over to the most fantastic variety of Teutonic chauvinistic racism. It was this woman who became the editor of Nietzsche.

The blame cannot be laid completely on Nietzsche's sister. Such Nietzschean phrases as "will to power," "master morality," and "blond beast," taken out of context, helped to fortify this legend.

After giving a brief and clear account of the formation of the Nietzsche legend at the very beginning of the book, Mr. Kaufmann goes on to examine Nietzsche's own life. Mr. Kaufmann is clearly a philosopher by nature, and he is a teacher of philosophy (at Princeton) by profession. He tends therefore to find a little more system in Nietzsche than is actually there, but the leading themes and the leading ideas do get quite clarified. Thus for example, it is made plain that Nietzsche's "philosophy of power" was far from being a conception of external and brutal manipulation of other people, of a master race manipulating slaves. Power is interpreted rather as personal realization, as enhancement of individual being and not in terms of the heel and helmet of a conquering nation.

Certain ambiguities and indecisiveness are perhaps inevitable in writing on Nietzsche, but Mr. Kaufmann has provided us with a useful study of what Nietzsche said and what apparently he meant rather than what detractors and special-pleading exploiters have said about him.

Defending an Abused General

GENERAL CHARLES LEE, by John Richard Alden. (Louisiana State University Press, 349 pp., $4.75.)

Setting aside national, partisan and personal prejudices, Mr. Alden has written a scholarly and most interesting book devoted to proving that Gen. Charles Lee of our Revolutionary army was not a traitor. Scorned, abused and neglected, Lee is recalled by the average high school student as "that traitor" or as the general whom Washington "cursed at the Battle of Monmouth." Mr. Alden, professor of history at the University of Nebraska, offers the English-born general as a real patriot, a foe of all tyrants and George III in particular, the best military tactician on the American side, and a man who saw in America the fulfillment of his dreams of an ideal republic. Many of the writers of historical romances would do well to study the style with which Mr. Alden presents history.

BRITISH MISSION ARRIVES IN IRAN FOR TALKS ON OIL

Exchange of Notes Shows Both Sides Yielded Somewhat in Agreeing to Negotiate.

TEHRAN, Aug. 4 (AP)—A British cabinet mission arrived today for new talks on the Iranian oil nationalization dispute.

The mission, headed by Lord Privy Seal Richard A. Stokes, was met at the airport by W. Averell Harriman, American trouble-shooter in the Iranian oil crisis, and Javad Buseri, Iranian minister of roads. The British will see Premier Mohammed Mossadegh tomorrow.

Mossadegh made an appearance today before the Senate, where he praised Harriman for his "sincere efforts" to pave the way for new negotiations.

At the same time, Mossadegh outlined the terms of yesterday's agreement to resume talks—discussing he apparently has dropped Iran's old ironclad insistence on carrying its drastic oil nationalization law out to the letter.

It is apparent the 70-year-old premier is awaiting public reaction to the new talks.

The wily, nationalistic Mossadegh did not say in so many words that he offered a compromise to Britain. In fact, he told the Senators he would resign rather than back down on nationalization. But it is plain from the exchange of notes that both sides gave in somewhat.

Mossadegh said he has accepted Iran's nationalization law of last March, which ordered the takeover from the Anglo-Iranian Oil Co. in general language. Then he said Iran has agreed to discuss the carrying out of nationalization on those parts which deal with the interests of Britain.

In the past, Mossadegh had stood on the second nationalization law, passed in May. This law provided for stripping the British of oil profits, management, and installations—including the world's biggest refinery at Abadan.

REDS REFUSE TO BUDGE INCH ON BUFFER ZONE

Nucleus said the truce teams were as far apart yesterday as they were when they first began discussing it. That was July 27.

The twentieth session is scheduled tomorrow at 11 a.m. (8 p.m. Saturday, St. Louis time).

V. Adm. C. Turner Jones, senior United Nations envoy, opened today's session by reading a prepared statement which took 44 minutes, including time for translation.

The communiqué said Joy made "still another effort to discover a mutually acceptable viewpoint as a forerunner to a possible agreement on item two of the agenda."

Joy's statement was not made public but Nucleus said it was "very definitely no compromise."

At the end of his statement Joy suggested that the two delegations examine the map to get down to specific cases.

Nam Rejected Suggestion.

Nam I, after a whispered conference with the other Communist delegates, rejected Joy's suggestion.

The U.N. supreme command said Nam I declared the Reds "could not depart in any particular from their previously stated attitude" on the issue of a cease-fire line.

Nucleus was asked whether the United Nations was using its air and naval power as a bargaining lever in the conference.

"Yes," he replied, "they contribute to the total military power."

But he said the "extreme range" of Allied air and naval power "does not enter into the formulation of the suggested demilitarized zone." He described the U.N. suggestion in that direction as a "modest one" and added that it would be "completely erroneous to speculate on any line deep in North Korea."

Neutrality Violation Charge.

In a brief afternoon session, Joy "noted for the record" that armed Chinese soldiers had violated the Kaesong neutral zone. An estimated company of Red troops passed within a few hundred yards of the U.N. staff house, located about a quarter of a mile from the conference site.

By agreement no armed personnel are to be within one-half mile of the conference site and troops within a five-mile radius of the Kaesong traffic circle are supposed to be limited to those necessary to perform military police duties.

Nucleus quoted Nam as saying simply, "We will let you know later."

Asked if the incident might in any way endanger the armistice talks, Nucleus replied, "I am certainly not in a position to make any predictions on that."

He said he was not in a position to give any reason for the presence of the Chinese troops.

"I will not say it was planned," he said. "I have no idea."

Troops Meet Resistance.

On the fighting front, meanwhile, attacking U.N. troops ran into stubborn Red resistance in the Yoncheon area, in the west. The Reds were supported by mortar and artillery fire.

On the central front, U.N. forces repulsed an enemy attack that began last night. The Reds withdrew after firing 500 artillery rounds.

Across the rest of the peninsula only patrol activity was reported.

Fifth Air Force planes flew 208 combat missions against enemy marine and transport facilities.

Marine Corsairs bombed a supply dump south of Changjin. F-84 Thunderjets bombed a railroad marshaling yard south of Pyongyang, the North Korean capital.

HERESY DISPUTE REVIVED IN EAST

With Arrest of 6 Selling Book

WESTERLY, R. I., Aug. 4 (AP)—A two-year-old heresy dispute came up again yesterday with the arrest of six persons for selling outside the Catholic Church. That belief was pronounced a heresy by the Most Rev. Richard J. Cushing of the Boston Catholic Archdiocese, who then sentenced Father Feeney and deprived him of his church faculties. Father Feeney also was expelled from the Society of Jesus.

St. Benedict's center, which Father Feeney conducted near Harvard university, was deprived of its rights under the G.I. education law and Catholics were forbidden to attend it.

The church's position is that any person outside the Catholic Church who isn't convinced of the church's righteousness but who lives a decent Christian life can be saved.

RED BUILDUP GOES ON DURING TRUCE TALKS—RIDGWAY

Actions Similar to Those Preceding Previous Major Offensives, He Tells U.N.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Aug. 4 (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, United Nations commander in Korea, reported to the U.N. today that the Communists continued their military buildup in Korea after the beginning of the cease-fire discussions.

Ridgway's new report covered the period July 1 to July 15, during which the preliminary peace talks were held and the formal agenda negotiations were begun.

After pointing out that military activities on both sides continued while the talks were going on, Ridgway said:

"The most significant military development during the period was continuation of hostile activities which heretofore have been a new major offensive."

"The enemy continued to augment his supply installations, particularly near the central and eastern fronts, and markedly increased the artillery and mortar support to practically all his forward elements as far east as Pila."

News of the Churches in St. Louis Area

DR. ADAMS RETURNS FROM YUGOSLAVIA

St. Louis Minister Praises U.S. Aid to Poverty-Ridden Peoples.

American aid to Greece and Yugoslavia "has paid off," Dr. Rev. Dr. Hampton Adams said yesterday after visiting those two countries.

"Undoubtedly aid to Greece through ECA (Economic Cooperation Administration) has prevented that nation from becoming a satellite of Moscow," Dr. Adams said.

The minister of Union Avenue Christian Church returned Thursday from a special mission to Greece and Yugoslavia on behalf of the World Council of Churches. He was one of five Americans, and the only one from the St. Louis area, among the 16 members of the mission. The group represented 10 nations and 18 denominations.

Churches Are Supervised.

"There is obviously freedom of movement in Yugoslavia," Dr. Adams said, "but all churches are closely supervised by the Commission on Religious Affairs. A representative of this commission traveled with our party all the time. There is a federal commissioner on religious affairs in Belgrade, and a commissioner for each of the six republics which make up Yugoslavia on Soviet lines."

METHODIST GIRLS BUY SWISS CALF FOR ANDES INDIANS OF ECADOR

A BROWN Swiss bull calf will be flown this month by mission plane (at an altitude of 8000 feet) into Ecuador, where missionaries report the native Indians—descendants of the famous Incas—were driven into the mountains by the invading Spaniards—are in great need.

The calf was bought with funds contributed by Methodist girls who attended a summer camp at Northfield, Mass.

The animal will be sent by boat to Guayaquil, Ecuador, where the plane will pick it up. It is consigned to Oliver Mabee, a livestock specialist among the missionaries at the United Andean Mission, who has a plan to improve the breed cattle owned by the Indians and thereby improve their food supply.

Army to Field Football Team in Fall

No Word as to Number of Players Dismissed

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP)—Army will field a football team this fall. That much seems certain.

But whether it'll resemble the power houses of recent years is a question that Coach Earl Blaik himself probably can't answer until he surveys what is left of a squad riddled by dismissals for cheating in examinations.

Ninety unidentified cadets were expelled yesterday for cribbing and Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, said no names would be announced.

But Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia said General Collins told him and several other Senators that most of the Army football team was involved.

Blaik could not be reached for comment. He was at the academy Thursday but had "disappeared" yesterday when Secretary of the Army Frank Pace Jr. disclosed in Washington that the cadets had broken the sacrosanct honor code of the United States Military Academy.

However, Col. James Leach, head of the academy's information office, said the Army would play football this fall.

That means a schedule highlight by Southern California in New York, Nov. 3 and the traditional game with Navy in Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium, Dec. 1.

Dartmouth, Harvard and The Citadel don't appear too formidable at this stage even for a rebuilt Army eleven. But the remainder of the schedule, in addition to U.S.C. and Navy, includes such gridiron powers as Villanova, Northwestern, Columbia and Pennsylvania.

Even without yesterday's setback, Army was destined to enter its 1951 campaign minus 10 of last year's players—most of whom figured in the Cadets' 26-game winning streak before they were beaten by Navy 14-2 in last fall's final game.

Gone were such offensive stars as Dan Fobberg, captain and left end; Guard Bruce Emmerich, tackle; Bruce Ackerman and Frank Fischl, Gil Stephenson and Jack Martin from the backfield. On the defense, Charles Shira, left tackle and Harold Shultz, halfback, also were lost by graduation.

But by the close of spring practice Blaik had molded what appeared to be another rugged gridiron machine even though depth in the defensive unit was lacking.

Blaik again had built his offensive unit around his own son, Bob, as quarterback. With him in the backfield would be Al Pollard, expected to be one of the Army's greatest fullbacks and Gene Filipski and Vic Pollock at the halfback position.

Up front there were Hal Leohn, a third string end shifted to guard and named captain; Bob Haas back for another season at center; Jim Guardino and Lew Zeigler as the ranking tackle candidates and John Weaver and Dick Roberts at ends.

The none-too-deep defensive platoon included the fine pair of line backers on Don Beck and Elmer Stout; Gibby Reich, backfield safety man; Raymond Malavasi, a guard and J. D. Kimmel, a bruising 210-pound tackle from Texarkana, Tex.

But there was no word from Washington or from Don Beck and Elmer Stout, Gibby Reich, backfield safety man; Raymond Malavasi, a guard and J. D. Kimmel, a bruising 210-pound tackle from Texarkana, Tex.

Doubles Victory Today Would Put U.S. in Davis Cup Final

RYE, N.Y., Aug. 4 (UP)—Herb Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., and Vic Seixas of Philadelphia can clinch the American zone semifinals for the United States Davis Cup tennis today by beating Mexico's Vega brothers, Armando and Rolando, in doubles.

The United States raced off to a 2-0 lead by winning the opening matches yesterday at the Rye Country Club. Art Larsen of San Leandro, Calif., the United States national singles champion, defeated Armando Vega, 7-5, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5, and Flam easily whipped Mexican champion Mario Llamas, 6-1, 6-2, 6-4.

Victory for both playing captain Frank Seixas' experimental Flam-Seixas doubles combination would give the Americans the series and qualify them to meet the winner of the Canada-Cuba series for the American Zone championship.

The American Zone champion will play Sweden, the European titleholder, for the right to challenge Australia for the huge silver trophy at Sydney next December.

Larsen, who is America's top-ranked player but who has been having his troubles on the summer circuit, extended himself only to hold his own serve to take the set. Both players were erratic in the fourth set and there was a string of four straight service breaks midway through the set. Larsen finally cut loose with some powerful placements in the twelfth game to clinch the match.

The 22-year-old Flam won easily, taking advantage of the youthful Llamas' nervousness, the Californian broke service four times in the first set, twice in the second and three times in the third set for his triumph.

Disqualification At Fairmont; $249,642 Bet

By Herman Wecke

Last spring during Fairmont Park's 25-day race meeting, there was only one disqualification of a winner. Well, that mark was tied the first night of the late-summer meeting, when Dandy G was disqualified and placed second following the running of last night's sixth race.

The bang-tails incidentally came back with a bang, a crowd of 8192 wagering $249,642 on the nine races. Last spring's handle was $235,325.

In the Dandy G race, the Silver Creek Farm's four-year-old, with Fritz Becker in the saddle, broke in front, but bore out in the stretch interfering with Fighting Fool. In that drive, Becker struck Fighting Fool with his whip several times. Following the race, J. Matson, on Fighting Fool, complained to the stewards and Dandy G was disqualified.

Fighting Fool, the favorite, paid $5 to $2 to win. Dandy G, which won the opening feature at the spring meeting and refunded $58.60 for $2, paid $6.80 to place. He was held at 7 to 1 in the market when necessary yesterday.

Wally Humes, St. Louis rider, got flaming Bush off in front in the $2000 spring feature, and kept the W. Hoffman five-year-old ahead all the way to win from Head Castle two and one-half lengths. Hopes of Sam was third, flaming Bush paid $5.20. Humes also won with Helen's Honey at $23 for $2 in the second. Roberto Torrens, with Stasia B and All Tilly was the only other jockey to score two firsts.

Those fans who like to have more than one horse running for them collected in the fifth, when Segewood, in the field with Roman Pop and Grey Del, finished second to Garrett C to pay $6. The Del R. field had to pay $6 in the ninth at $14.20.

In the $2500 "Illmo" at one mile and one-sixteenth, which features tonight's program, starting at 8:30 o'clock, Quince Helm is the weighted at 117 pounds, with Shorliff carrying 115. Mr. Dink, Monmouth, Millo, Riot, Fast Donna and Wee Fours are the others entered.

Week's Stock Volume Larger As Prices Rise

Shares Try Valiantly and Vainly to Set New Highs—Ralls Lower.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (UP)—Stocks tried valiantly and vainly to set new highs during the past week. The industrial average missed a new 21-year high by a whisker. It closed the week at 262.98, up 3.75 points on the week, but 15-100th under the high since June 6, 1930, set last May 3.

The railroad average performed more poorly. It lost nearly 34 points on the week and failed to match its July recovery high by 1 cent and was more than nine points under the year's high. From a technical view this was a sour note, according to the market experts.

Trading increased to 8,538,046 shares for the week compared with 7,563,700 shares last week. The daily average was 1,707,608 shares and in one session—Thursday—volume exceeded 2,000,000 shares.

After having risen through most of July, the market had a rather sharp setback on the last day of the month. Industrials recouped but rails were lagging behind. Utilities set a new high since 1931 and closed at the top level for a gain of 0.70 point on the week.

Leaders in the upturn among the industrials included such groups as the chemical, oil, tire and copper. Autos enjoyed a good market on Thursday when it was indicated auto companies might get price advances under the new controls bill. Steels rose after the United States Steel report, showing record earnings, record taxes and lower net income was out of the way. Irving S. Olds, chairman of United States Steel, saw a busy time ahead for the industry without indication of coming up with demand.

A number of companies, including several oils, reported higher earnings. Some favorable dividend actions were taken and no particularly unfavorable ones were reported. Special issues generated good market. Selected stocks of the leading groups often turned in wide gains on news items beamed at them.

Weakness in the rails reflected delay in the Interstate Commerce Commission ruling on the roads' plea for higher freight rates. The ICC made an announcement during the week, but that one involved some freight cuts in an effort to level off rates for various sections of the nation. And finally, the railroad industry checked a stimulant such as that last week's spurt of 26 points in Nickel Plate. That road lost 6 1/2 points this week on profit-taking.

Had it not been for the Nickel Plate loss the rails would have closed higher on the week.

Individual Gains

Utility gains involved one of 3 1/2 points for Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line and 2 1/2 points in American Gas & Electric. American Gas & Electric preferreds generated strength Friday on a move to modify the company's reorganization plan. Gains in these issues exceeded 9 points apiece. There were several other wide Chemical spread over the list. Dow Chemical gained 6 1/2 points and its second preferred made the sensational rise of 69 1/2 points. National Lead was up 5 1/2, New York Central 4 1/2, and American 3 1/2. Chemical 3 1/2, McKesson & Robbins 3 1/2, and Allis Chalmers 5 1/2. Mahoning Coal Railroad lost 10 points.

Steels gained more than a point. Motors were narrowly regular. American Cadillac rose in the industrial average group with a 3-point rise. Jersey Standard and Union Carbide gained 2 each.

She Was The First

'Trude' Ederle Recalls Her Channel Swim

By Inez Robb

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (INS). — The middle-aged woman picked up the menu and then reached for her handbag. She rummaged through it and brought out a pair of horn-rimmed glasses. Then her wide, generous mouth broke into a smile once famous the world 'round.

GERTRUDE EDERLE

woman in history to do so.

Trude says she has taken on weight, but her broad, powerful shoulders still slope to a neat waist, a flat stomach and trim hips. Her short, naturally curly hair is still dark brown, untouched with a single thread of gray. Her brown eyes are lively and sparkling. And she wears her hearing aid so skillfully it is literally invisible.

"The old girl isn't getting any younger," she laughed, and settled the glasses on her short, straight nose.

But otherwise time has dealt lightly with Gertrude — Trude Ederle, now 44 years old, who 25 years ago on Aug. 6 electrified the nation and the world, too, when she swam the English Channel, the first

ONE OF THE AUTHENTIC greats of the turbulent, the roaring, the fabulous 'twenties, Trude is a living part of the legend that made the 'twenties, turbulent, roaring and fabulous. Twenty-five years ago come Monday, the nation literally went wild when word was flashed from England that the 19-year-old New York girl had conquered the channel, the first woman and the sixth person in history to swim this tricky body of water.

She came home to the most tumultuous welcome New York had ever poured out upon an individual, and to the first great ticker tape ride up Broadway, "complete with Grover Whalen, carnation and all," she recalled with a chuckle. Nothing turned her head then, and nothing has since. The nation never had a more modest heroine.

AND IT WAS a modest woman who sat across the luncheon table. "I don't want to sound like a poor sport or to take any glory away from anyone ever, but I would like to say that I don't consider my Channel record has ever been broken," she said.

"I know Florence Charwick swam the channel in 13 hours and 23 minutes last summer, as against my 14 hours and 30 minutes.

"But she made the crossing in 23 miles under ideal weather conditions all the way. I swam thirty-five miles to get across during a storm so severe for seven and a half hours that warnings were posted on both the French and English sides of the Channel, warning shipping not to leave port.

"FOUR TIMES during the storm, my father and my trainer begged me to give it up. But I had made my father promise before we left France that he wouldn't take me out of the water until I collapsed. We had shaken hands on it, and later he told me the only reason he hadn't taken me out forcibly was because of his promise and handshake.

"They wanted me to quit because the storm was so bad they were afraid I'd get lost and drown. Or that the boat accompanying me would be swept ahead of me by the waves and we would lose each other."

TRUDE STABBED at the chicken salad and smiled.

"You know, it was an eerie feeling out there in the Channel to loom up and not be able to see the boat and wonder if it would ever find me again," she said.

Everyone on the official boat and in the press boat was sick as dogs. But not Trude. She was never sick or scared or uncertain. She just plowed right along through the storm.

"I feel like a fish in water," she said, "and I felt like one that day."
The 19-year-old girl held 29 national and world records as she started the swim that day 25 years ago. And she had been high point scorer in the Olympics in Paris two years before. Some of the records still stand, including her 21-mile swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook in seven hours, 11 minutes in 1925.

IT HURTS TRUDE STILL that (1) the report got around the nation that her father took all the earnings accruing from her fame as a Channel swimmer and (2) that she is broke.

"My father loaned me $2500 to help finance the successful swim. He didn't even want me to pay it back, but I insisted."

Far from being broke, Trude is financially secure and independent, with ample money to live a pleasant, comfortable life.

Who isn't who owns a butcher shop in these times? And when Papa Ederle died, part of his famous butcher shop and meat business on Amsterdam avenue was inherited by Trude, and is now a thriving provisions house managed by her two brothers. She is the center of a beloved and loving family and Monday's anniversary will be quietly celebrated with her mother, brothers and sisters.

"It cost me my hearing, and a lot of people come up to me nowadays and say, 'Nothing was worth it, was it?'" Trude said. Then that wonderful smile illuminated her face and she added:

"I just don't know what they are talking about. It was worth everything, everything!"

Many Happy Returns

Bits of fruit cascade from a scooped-out watermelon as Bamboo, prize gorilla at the Philadelphia Zoo, winds up to speedily return the birthday "cake" which photographers presented to him yesterday. At right, photographers and a zoo attendant attempt to get out of range as their gift comes splattering back in their faces. Rated as the oldest gorilla in captivity—25 years old tomorrow—Bamboo has earned respect with his pitcher's delivery. He usually looks away just before firing unwanted gifts at his victims and scored a direct hit with half a watermelon at an earlier birthday celebration.

Martha Carr's OPINION =

Dear Martha Carr:
HAD a date with my boy friend not long ago. My best girl friend had no date, so we took her with us that evening. She began flirting with my boy friend and acting very silly. Her brother was there with his date, and saw how foolishly my friend acted. But she did not stop there. Now she has caused trouble between my boy friend and me and we have broken up and I feel so bad about this. What can I do?

1. Next time don't be so eager to share your boy friend even with a "best" girl friend. 2. If your boy friend can transfer his allegiance so quickly what do you want with him? 3. Dry those tears and find another boy friend who will have a little more constancy.

I WENT STEADY with the same fellow for five months. I like him very much and thought he felt the same toward me. However, for a whole month now I have not seen or heard from him. Friends have seen him out with other girls and I have been dating other fellows. He did this once before, and came back to me. This time I have his ring. Surely he will have to come back sometime to get it, won't he? I hate to break up with him, and yet he has acted this way twice now and I don't like to risk having it happen again. What shall I do when I do see him, and how shall I act in the meanwhile?

You might as well face the fact that this is a boy who does not crave to stay hitched, and give up trying to force him. He has broken your going steady agreement and you have also been dating other boys. Lay aside his ring and if he does not come for it soon, mention to him that you have it and he can come by for it. Or if he does not take up the suggestion, make an opportunity to return it to him, or mail it to him. When you see him smile—and I don't mean just show your teeth. Act friendly and not miffed. Meantime continue to date others and have a good time as usual. All is not lost because one boy has been fickle.

IN ANSWER TO "Ruth": Talk to your husband's doctor and see if he can get your husband to take a different attitude. His getting well may depend largely on just that. As to your own health, better see your doctor regarding that also. When a person is tired 24 hours of the day there is something that needs attention—perhaps a little more rest, more recreation or the like, something as simple as that, but necessary. If you will go to the Family and Children's Services, 4643 Lindell boulevard, they will help you regarding the budget, the handling of your household money and explain how to get those back bills paid. You can't just keep on dodging them indefinitely. The children are yours and you should see to it that they are managed your way. If you feel that in helping as your oldest girl does at present she is doing all that is asked of her, that is up to you. Of course she needs a lot of play at her age. Don't do anything as drastic as you have suggested until you have talked this matter over with the doctors and with a social worker. You have to make allowances for your husband at present under the circumstances. Given time all this should clear up if you will take the course recommended to you. The children should have a united home if possible.

IN ANSWER TO "T": My rose jar recipe is just the thing! By making a rose jar you can preserve the sweetness of your summer garden all through the winter.

IN ANSWER TO "Tom": My "Names for Boys and Girls" will give you dozens of suggestions. Send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I'll mail this leaflet to you.

We, The Women 'Feel Alive' to Make Others Feel That Way

By RUTH MILLETT

HOLLYWOOD Columnist Erskine Johnson, reporting on a conversation with John Barrymore Jr., about his famous aunt, Ethel Barrymore, quotes the young man as saying: "I'm learning things by living with Aunt Ethel, temporarily. You feel alive walking into Aunt Ethel's house."

Ethel Barrymore is a rare personality, of course. But any intelligent woman can achieve that power of making people "feel alive."

Good hostesses have it. So do our most fascinating friends. We don't usually analyze their attraction. We just know that they are interesting to be with, that they give us something important.

ACTUALLY, ISN'T it usually true that these people are themselves interested in a great number of things—so interested in these things that they can't help sharing their interest with others?

They make others "feel alive" because they are themselves so much alive, so interested in all that goes on around them. The dull bores are the people who have narrowed their interest down to only those things that concern their everyday living.

The woman whose chief topics of conversation are her health, her children, her household problems, and gossip about the neighbors couldn't make anybody feel alive. She is only half alive herself.

She is bored—and so she is boring.

LEARN ALL YOU CAN about a number of things. Try to learn something from everyone you know. And then when you are with others, let your own interest stimulate theirs.

That's the real secret of making others "feel alive."

Social Problems

By Emily Post

WORRIED AUNT writes: "My niece who is very close to us is getting married. Her own parents are divorced and she has asked my husband to give her away. She is under the impression that as her mother is not friendly in any way with her father it would be unsuitable to have him perform this office. I don't know what effect it will have on her father or his relatives but I'm afraid it will come as a bombshell and I hate to have my husband the direct target. Will you advise what is right?"

Taking it for granted that she loves her own father and her only objection is his feeling toward her mother, her father should give her away. To choose her uncle is to repudiate her father. The rules for this situation are definitely established. Correctly, her father will go for her the morning of the wedding, walk up the aisle with her, give her away, join members of his family in one of the pews. He will not appear at the reception.

DEAR MRS. POST: Please advise us if it is right or wrong to wear sun-back dresses to business offices? I mean, of course, to sit in the office on a hot day without the jacket. Our boss will abide by your answer.

Definitely not—sun-back dresses do not belong in an office.

Playing Canasta To Win

By Albert H. Morehead

AMONG the numerous local rules that players take onto their canasta games is one that says: You can't have a "double freeze."

Of course, technically, there is no such thing as a double freeze. Either the pack is frozen or it isn't. What they mean is that if there is already one wild card in the discard pile, you can't throw another wild card if you have anything else to throw.

But the laws say you can throw a wild card or anything else, and sometimes it is a good play to do so. Both sides have melded and are now fighting for the pack, which is building up. The pack is frozen. This is a situation in which you are more interested in saving pairs than in anything else.

You have five pairs, none of them in a rank that the opponents have melded. This is the best type of hand you could possibly have when you are fighting for a frozen discard pile.

Of course, your wild cards are valuable, too. They may eventually build another canasta for you. But they are not as valuable as your pairs.

So, although the pack is already frozen, you should discard your deuce. On the next round, if the odd card you draw does not constitute a safe discard, you might well consider throwing your joker. Certainly no player at the table can have a better chance than you to go to the pack; it is hardly possible that any other player has as good a chance. This means the wild cards will probably come back to you in due course anyway.

Question: In a two-hand game, I needed 120 but forgot and thought I needed only 90. A king was discarded and I took it with a joker and three kings. I didn't make any other meld. After two or three more plays, my opponent noticed that I hadn't melded enough. What did I have to do then?

Answer: Nothing except go on playing. The minute your opponent made his next draw, your meld became legal and sufficient.

Mr. Morehead receives hundreds of questions each week and cannot answer them all in this column. If you wish a personal reply, please include a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your question. Please address Mr. Morehead in care of the Post-Dispatch.

Fix It Yourself

By Hubbard Cobb

Coverings for Poor Ceilings. COMES a time when many a home owner gives up trying to keep up with the cracks in a plaster ceiling and decides that what he can't fix he can cover. This is a very smart idea and he can cover the old ceiling with something like plasterboard, wallboard, pressedwood or plywood. All these come in sheets 4 feet by 8 feet or longer. Step one to getting a new ceiling is to remove any of the trim around the top of the walls. Next you need a base to fasten the new ceiling material to. This base is made up of strips of 1 inch by 3 inch nailed through the ceiling plaster into the ceiling framework. The wood strips should be spaced 16 inches from center to center. Be sure that the nails you use actually get into the ceiling framework and not just into the plaster and lath.

If your ceiling is a bit uneven, it can be leveled off at this time by leveling the 1-inch by 3-inch strips. This is done by placing thin strips of wood between the wood strips and the old ceiling so that each wood strip is level.

Once the wood framing strips are in place the 4-foot by 8-foot panels are hoisted up and nailed in place.

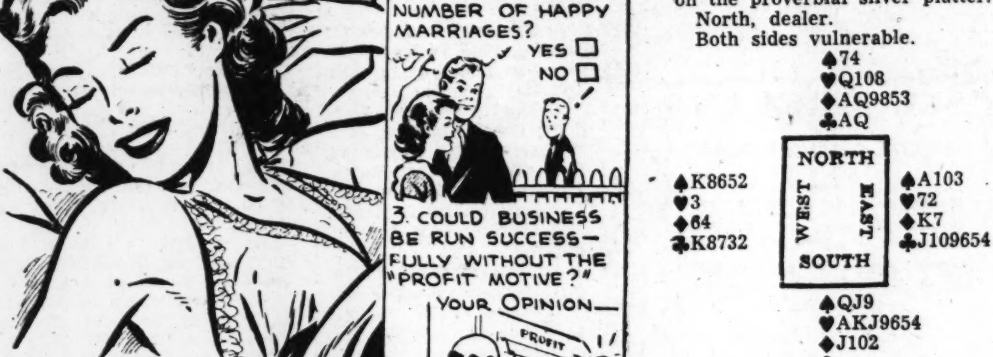

They'll Do It Every Time

By Jimmy Hatlo

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Albert Edward Wiggam, D.Sc.

1. CAN A DREAM THAT SEEMS TO LAST FOR HOURS OCCUR IN SECONDS? YES NO

Answer to Question No. 1. Yes. I recently went to sleep during a lecture (as I have seen many persons do when listening to me). As I dropped off, a man next to me let out a bomb-like sneeze that awakened me. Yet, in those seconds I dreamed I was fighting in Korea. We marched for miles, passed long lines of troops and drove thousands of Reds into the Yalu river. I wish I could think that fast when awake! Psychologist Louis William Max has shown that dreams last from one second to three minutes—but rarely longer.

Answer to Question No. 2. Yes. I've found they are unwilling to believe the facts. In a Stanford University study of 792 marriages, Prof. Lewis M. Terman found that all but 212 scored "average" or "above average" in happiness. Other studies show that from 80 to 90 per cent of married couples rate their marriage as average or above, in happiness. Our booklet, "How to Predict Your Married Happiness," sent at cost, 15 cents (coin only), plus self addressed, stamped envelope.

Answer to Question No. 3. 3. It depends on what is meant by "profit grabbing." If you mean selfish money grabbing, I think this is nonsense. If you mean that men would not work without pay, that makes sense. Some co-operatives are run as successfully on $10,000 a year as independent corporations on $100,000 a year. Studies show that high wages do not prevent strikes but employees rank "pay" less important than fair treatment and a feeling of human dignity.

It was South's good fortune (and should have been West's misfortune) that West, with nothing to go by, happened to lead a low club instead of a spade. Declarer seized the opportunity for a free finesse, but when the queen held the trick he made the highly injudicious discard of a spade. He then tossed another spade on the club ace, after which he drew trumps and hopefully took the diamond finesse. He had tempted fate too far, however—East won the diamond and promptly cashed the spade ace.

It would have been infinitely more logical for South to discard diamonds on the queen and ace of clubs. The queen could have ruffed out the diamond suit with great ease, and discarded all three of his spades.

Big Sleeve Featured. The bigger the sleeves, the better. Claire McDowell likes them. One of her new fall dresses has oval armholes that extend to the waistline. The oval accent is repeated by big, oval pockets stitched to the front of the skirt. A black calfskin belt is worn to contrast with the light brown wool of the dress.

been seen near houses in various parts of southern Canada and in some northern sections of the United States.

Of the Gesell Institute of Child Development.

"MUCH 11-YEAR-OLD has such a chip on her shoulder. Everything I do—or don't do—is wrong. No matter what the problem is, whichever stand I take makes her unhappy. About mealtimes, for instance, if I try to get her to eat she complains that I'm mean and bossy; but if I don't mention her eating, she watches to see if I'm going to say anything, and if I don't, she complains that I wouldn't care if she starved to death. Whatever I do or say, I can't win!"

That is unfortunately true—you can't win. So don't get in there and fight!

Eleven wants that chip on her shoulder. She grows, unfortunately, through conflict, and particularly through conflict with her mother. The baby needs some durable substance against which to cut his teeth. Eleven needs something to work against, and if he meets with no resistance he will create resistance.

"YOU TREAT ME so badly. I know it's because I'm adopted," complained one 11-year-old, until her mother finally replied, "If you think you're adopted, look at your father and then look in the mirror."

The girl did so, and found the evidence as to her true origin unmistakable and irrefutable, but she was not satisfied. "That's all right," she said, "but if you had been adopting, you would have adopted somebody nicer than me, wouldn't you?"

"You don't care if I starve!" "You want somebody nicer than me!" Both of these children are saying the same thing to their mothers and are saying it with the dramatic exaggeration characteristic of eleven. They are saying, even though they may not know it, "I want you to care whether I starve or not."

"I want you to like me." But Eleven is awkward and he can't ask gracefully for what he wants.

JUST HOW you handle each specific situation that comes up will depend on you—it is difficult for an outsider to tell you exactly what to do. But if behind your handling is a recognition of the need for affection and acceptance, and of the wish for your appreciation and understanding, even though so awkwardly, your chances of success will increase.

My Day -O- By Eleanor Roosevelt

HYDE PARK. LAST Monday I made my annual visit to the Vassar summer institute for family and community living. This group is a most interesting gathering of parents and children who spend some time at Vassar. While the children are being taken care of by trained people the parents have an opportunity to attend courses and study a variety of subjects, some of them dealing with the children's lives and their upbringing.

I can always depend on this group to ask extremely interesting questions, and this year was no exception. I find these people stimulating and am always glad of the opportunity to talk with them.

On Thursday a section of the young people who are here to attend the World Assembly of Youth, meeting at Cornell University, came to Hyde Park. I had missed seeing one of the earlier sections which came on a day when I was in New York City, but I was pleased to have an opportunity to talk to these youngsters. They had bus trouble, which I find is not infrequent on these expeditions, and they were very late in arriving, but they made the most of their time and seemed to enjoy their visit.

I WONDER if many people realize what a tremendous piece of work has been undertaken by CARE in Yugoslavia through this summer.

Yugoslavia is one of the countries that suffered most during World War II, but it was nature which seemed to frown upon her recovery last year and brought her 75 days of drought. Four million tons of foodstuffs were lost—60 per cent of the harvest that had been expected to feed the people until the end of this summer.

There was already in Yugoslavia a great deal of economic dislocation because of her break with the Soviet countries in 1948. This break was made because of the patriotic nationalism of the Yugoslav people, who, even though they are convinced Communists, want to retain their national freedom. In making the break with the Soviet area it meant that much of their trade, which had been with the countries behind the Iron Curtain, was cut off. This created great hardship. Our Government has helped Yugoslavia by loans and our people have helped by sending food packages through CARE.

CARE IS ALWAYS able to organize the most difficult undertakings, so it was rapidly able to distribute thousands of food packages. These were donated by Americans who have friends or relatives in Yugoslavia, and even by Americans who have no personal tie but who wanted to help where there was need.

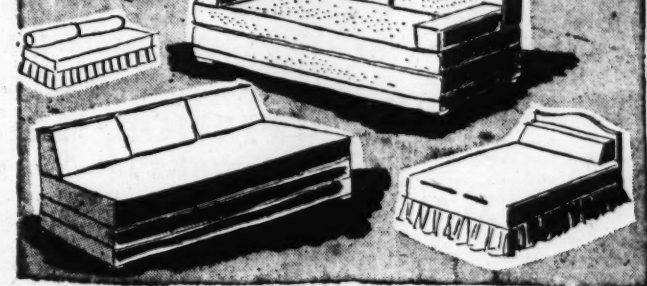

Congressman John A. Blatnik of Minnesota said in a speech recently that CARE had successfully obtained nearly 35,000,000 pounds of surplus food from the Department of Agriculture. This included powdered milk and egg powder, which is being distributed under the supervision of the CARE mission staff. This staff is composed of Americans and CARE in Yugoslavia through this summer.

Every mouthful that reaches these people not only is a token of our good will but is a weapon against Communist domination.

It's All Done With Bolsters

By Elizabeth Hillier

TURN a day-bed, a studio couch, or a boxspring-on-legs bed into a sofa. Make any bed top-comfortable for late reading. Trade part-time service for round-the-clock service. And perform this practical magic while you step up the furniture in style and give it a new spotlight place in the room. It's all done with bolsters.

The honeymoon home awaiting the new sofa, the one-room apartment, the study that must be a guest room, the bedroom that aspires to be a bed-sitting room—all these make no compromise with style when bolsters are added to plain sleeping comfort.

The biggest job a bolster can do is to make a back for the piece of furniture that lacks one, so it can be sat on comfortably without awkward sprawling. This takes depth at the base of the bolster so the depth of the seating surface is cut down. Today's favorite is the bolster that has a comfortable slant, and it may be fairly tall, to provide extra back support, or lower in the manner of modern sofas. Square bolsters are popular for both back and arms, in the same height, as in the upper right sketch, or with the back bolsters taller than the arm bolsters, as in the center sketch. The bed can become a corner piece with an arm bolster at one end only.

The slanted bolster is smart at the head of a bed, and the taller ones or triangular bolsters are deep comfort with the mid-night slouch. Round bolsters are often used lengthwise. Another styling idea is the flat rectangular bolster that is pillow-like but firm, combined with two round shapes of the same firmness, and both of these are useful and decorative extras which cut down seat depth more when they're used with large bolsters or on sofas.

Bolsters are easy to cover. They are best in the same fabric as the slipcover and with the same trim tailored, self-fabric weltings that give style to the handsomest upholstered furniture. This fall will see many new ready-made bolsters in the stores, in the many shapes sketched, slanted, triangular, square, round and in flat circles and rectangles, and in many sizes. These—shown in the previews of home furnishing fashions for fall in Chicago at the American Furniture Mart—were made in the same way as the bolsters you can buy now. They are filled with long-lasting, shape-retaining rubberized hair.

Find out what's wrong with the room before you change it. Check it over with the help of Elizabeth Hillier's new booklet "WHAT'S WRONG WITH THAT ROOM?" which not only spots weak points, but tells how to correct them. Send 15 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope, please, with your booklet request addressed to Miss Hillier at the Post-Dispatch.
